We value friendship, generosity and being a good sport.

Alex was about to fall asleep when he heard a noise: Thump, thump, thump. What was that?

"Pancho! It's you!" he cried. "Tomorrow is my first day of school. They will teach me to read and write there."

"School! Can I come with you?" Pancho asked.

"Of course you can! But make sure to be up bright and early and ready for school." Pancho ran off thinking about all the things he needed to take.

When Alex woke up he saw Pancho carrying all kinds of things.

“Where are you going with all that stuff, Pancho?”

Pancho was carrying a canteen, a pair of socks, an alarm clock, an umbrella, a scarf and a wheelbarrow.

“You told me to be ready!” he answered proudly.

“Oh, no, Pancho, we only need a pencil and some paper for school!”

Pancho put all the things down. Happily he put on the school bag Alex had ready for him. "You will also need a pinafore to keep your clothes clean."

Pancho put it on and looked at himself in the mirror. He admired himself from one side first and then from the other. Pancho was a bit conceited!

They left for school. Both friends were ready for a new day.

CINEMA

On their way, Alex told Pancho things about school while he listened carefully.

"The teacher explains many things to us. Then she asks us questions and if you know the right answer you must raise your hand. Don't forget to do so. We must also keep quiet while we are working in class.
