Alex's mother is going shopping today and she leaves him in charge.

"You are the man of the house now while I'm out, Alex. You must look after your twin sisters and have your evening snack. They are sleeping now, so you are in charge of making sure all is silent here, okay?"

"What fun!" Alex exclaimed. I'm the boss today.

Alex went to his room to look for a boss costume. He'll keep his sisters safe from any danger.

Suddenly he heard a noise. "What is that?" Thump, thump, thump! His friend is here! "Let's make a tower?" Pancho asked.

"I can't! Today I'm boss and I must look after my sisters. Do you want to help me?"

"Sure! That sounds like fun! But...what do we have to do?"

"We need some costumes to be bosses," Alex explained while he was looking in his toy box.

And in a flash...they are ready for the mission!
"I'm the boss of the house!" Alex exclaimed wearing a cowboy hat, a sheriff plaque and some handcuffs.

Pancho was wearing a strange colourful hat, a cape and a torch.

"Pancho, what are you dressed as?" Alex exclaimed laughing while Pancho admired himself proudly in the mirror.

Now they must check out the whole house. They start walking very slowly. Tap, tap, tap. Suddenly, while crossing the corridor, someone appeared. "An intruder!" Pancho cried out running down the corridor and throwing the torch up in the air. "Wait, wait!" Alex shouted, running after him. "It's not an intruder. It's Rufo!"
