ALEX AND PANCHO VISIT THE GRANDPARENTS

We value how much grandparents love us.

Next Sunday Alex was going to visit his grandparents and Pancho wanted to go with him. He had his grandparents in Dinosaur Land, too, but he wanted to meet Alex's grandparents.

"What are your grandparents like, Alex?"

"The same as all grandparents. They are a bit wrinkled and they can't stop kissing you."

"That's great, I want to meet them!"

Bancho, Alex and the twins were in the car on their way to their grandparent's house.

"What do you like the most about them?"

"I love the stories my grandfather tells me and my grandmother makes a delicious chocolate cake".

"My, I'm very nervous! We're going to hear stories and eat chocolate!"

The twins were sound asleep.

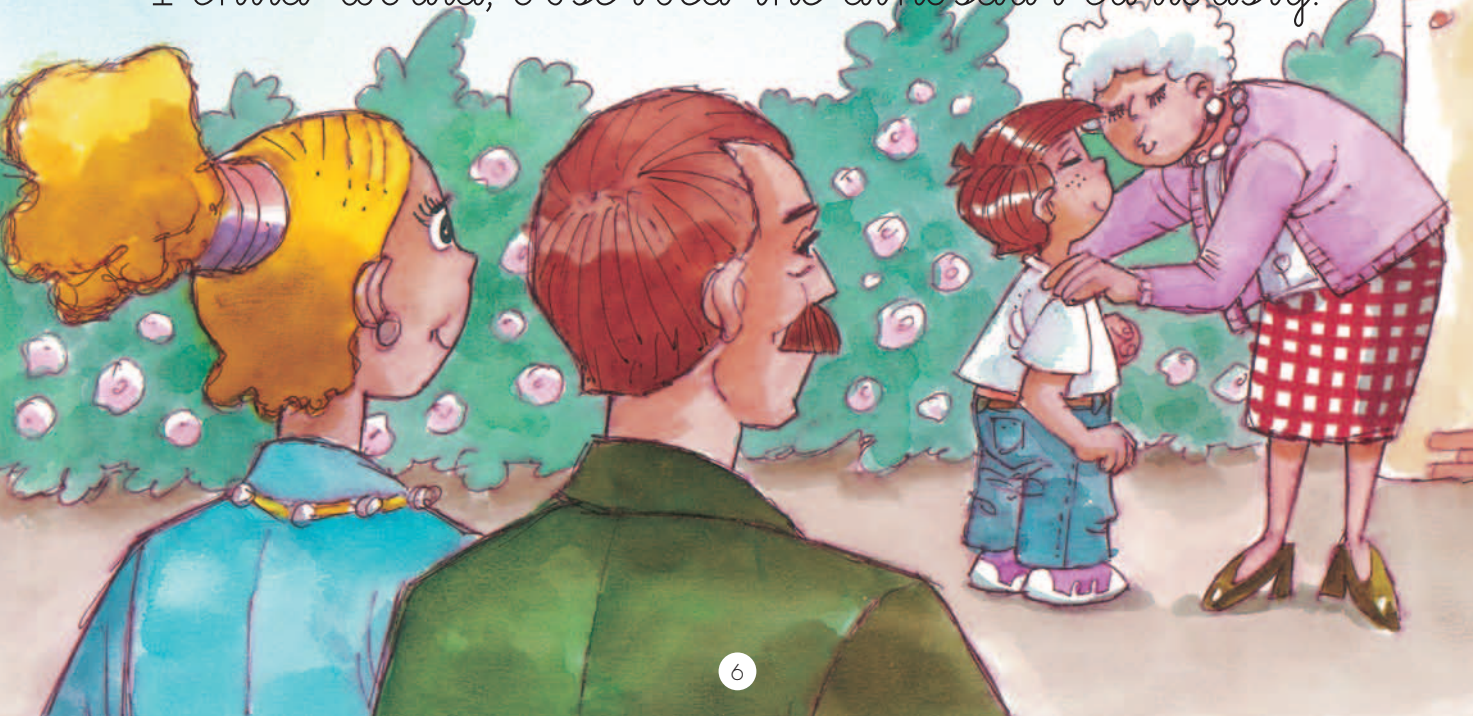

Alex's grandparents were waiting at the front door and when they saw him they kissed him all over.

"Alex, today I have an incredible adventure to tell you about!" said his grandfather.

As they went in, Pancho's nose noticed the aroma of the chocolate cake.

"Mm! It smells delicious!" Pancho cried out.

And the grandparents, who looked at him like I child would, observed the dinosaur curiously.

"Come to the table!" called grandmother as she started cutting the chocolate cake.

The table was set. They each had a glass of milk and a piece of cake.

While the twins have their bottle, Pancho and Alex dip the cake in their milk.

"It's the best chocolate cake ever!" Pancho said smacking his lips.
