We value shopping for what we need and enjoying people's company.

Alex and Pancho were going to spend the afternoon at the shopping centre. They were going by train and it was a beautiful warm day.

Pancho has never been to a shopping centre and he asked Alex.

“What’s a shopping centre?”

“A place full of shops where you can buy many things.”

“How much fun!” exclaimed Pancho.

On the way, Alex was thinking of what he wanted to buy.

“Mum, are you going to get something for me, too?”

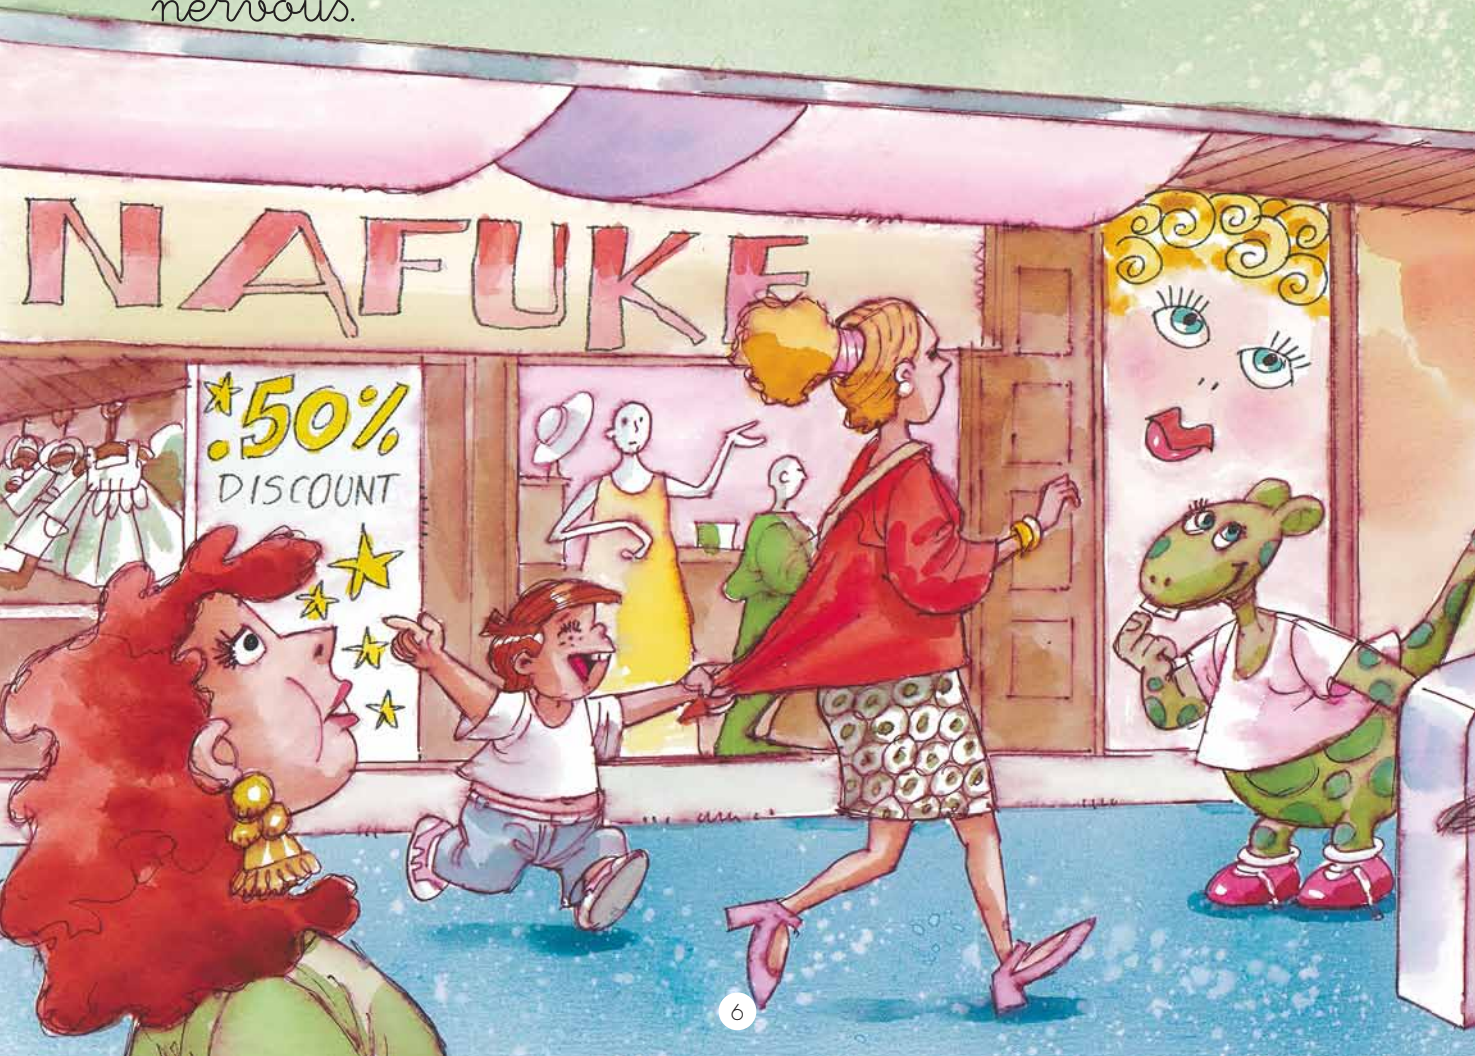

“We’ll see, Alex. But you can have lots of fun without buying anything, too.”

Alex couldn’t really believe that and he still wanted to buy a lot of things.

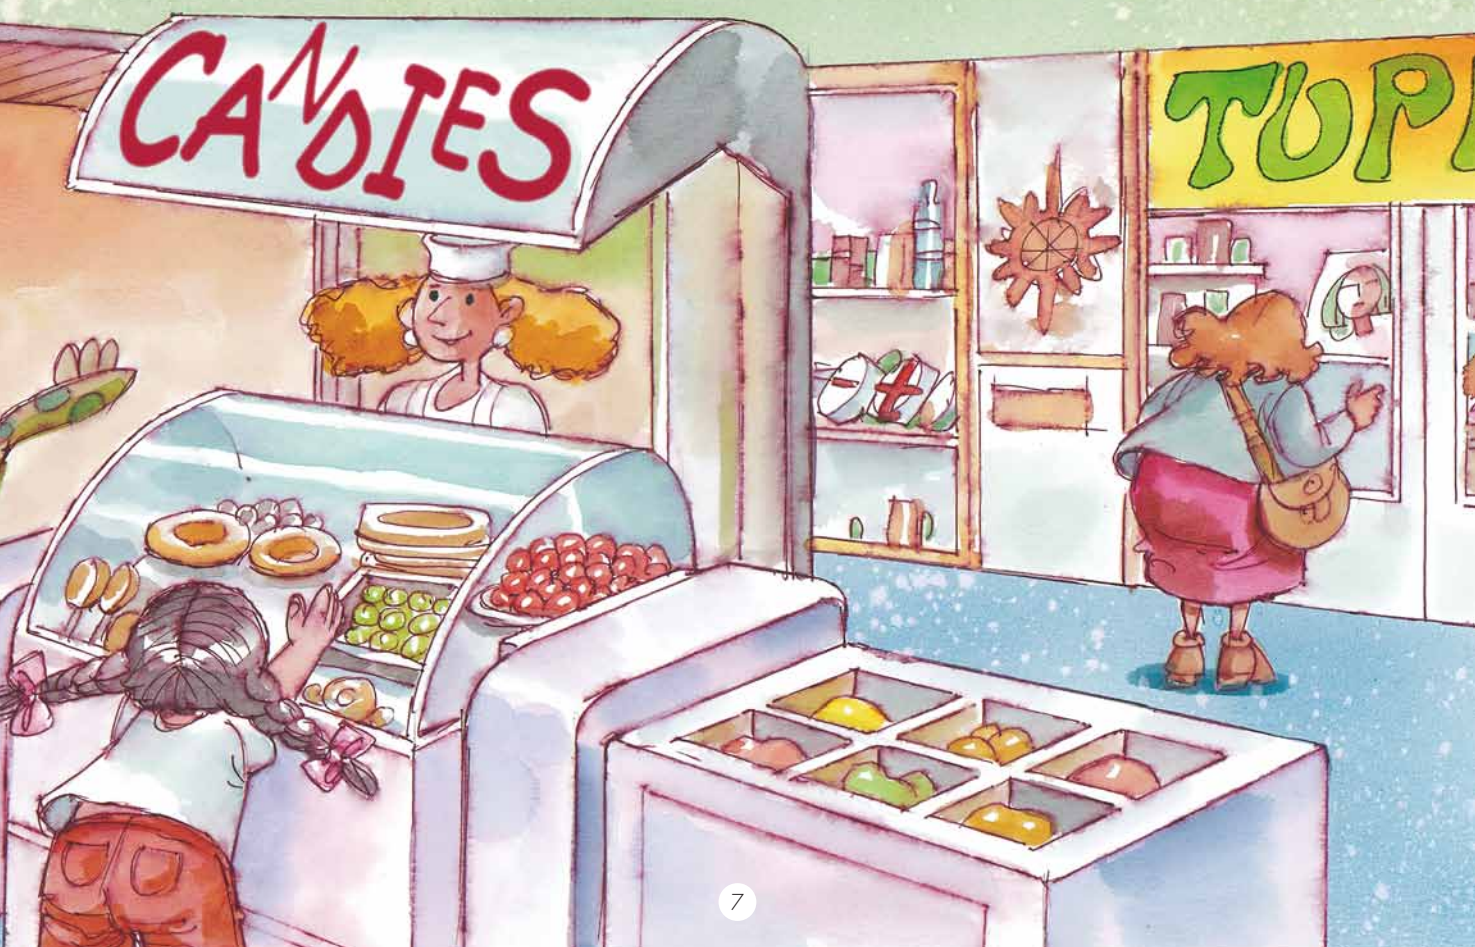

Meanwhile, Pancho was all excited with the excursion by train.

When they got to the shopping centre, Pancho was delighted. "There are many things in this place!" Alex wanted his mother to get him something and he was already getting nervous.

“Get me something, mum! Get me something!”
But his mother was busy shopping for home.
“Let’s play a game,” Pancho suggested. “We can’t say “Get me...” in the whole afternoon.”

Alex frowned. That game didn't sound like fun.

"Come, on, Alex. We must try to have fun without getting anything."

Alex thought about it and finally he exclaimed: "Alright, Pancho! We won't say the forbidden words in the whole afternoon."
